Dear Friends,

At times life takes unexpected twists and turns. I came home to Pennsylvania in August to visit family, attend a wedding and have minor surgery on my little toe. One sunny day, I decided to call friends at the SIM village in Sebring, FL where I live so I went out on the veranda with my cell phone, but a gust of wind picked up my list of telephone numbers, and it went sailing off the veranda with me in hot pursuit down a steep bank. You guessed it...I fell, broke my arm at the wrist and ended up in the Emergency Room at the local hospital.

My arm has healed, and I'm now getting Physical Therapy twice a week to strengthen my wrist and increase movement. I'm also waiting for a new brace for my left ankle then back to Florida. My sister, Rhea, with whom I have been staying, and my chauffeur to Doctors' appointments, etc. has decided to go back to Florida with me for a short visit.

The weather here has taken a turn for the worse—very cold with snow flurries and strong winds making Florida very desirable.

However it will be nice to have a White Christmas here with family and friends especially since I may not have another opportunity and am very grateful for this one.

May God bless you in remembering His wonderful gift of our Saviour,

In His love,

Greta
